HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

This book is intended to help game masters fill their 1960s and 1970s campaigns with appropriate details. The items are arranged into random tables, so results can be rolled on the fly which means less prep time for GMs.

Like all the books in the series, you will find helpful D100 tables within these pages. Game masters can roll on them or have their players roll. The tables can be used outside of a session or during a session. No matter how you choose to personally use them, their purpose is to cut down the time GMs need to spend preparing for game sessions.

The first section is Items & Things. It is a massive section that takes you from small-town America to Vietnam. Find items in a car, items in a CIA safe house, items in a Vietnamese hotel. Plus period cars, songs, movies, TV shows, and more which set the mood for your campaigns.

Next is People. This section provides real historical people that can be woven into sessions to enhance realism and make the setting feel richer.

Game masters always need names, so the Names section has been curated to reflect the most popular names at the time. Plus it includes surnames as well as given names.

The CB Lingo section is important for any role-playing games set in the 1970s. The long-haul truck driver was the folk hero of the 70s, and Citizen Band (CB) radios were all the rage. The section provides only a sampling of the myriad of terms and phrases used by truck drivers, but the popular terms have been chosen.

Gathering rumors is always fun in RPGs. The Diner Rumors table gives GMs quick and easy rumors that can be used by players as a side quest, flavor text, or even the main adventure.

Slang is always important to set the tone of a time period. The more than one hundred terms listed will help you and your players sound and act like people from the 60s and 70s.

With these random tables in hand, game masters can give the right tone and feel to their period games quickly. Players will be more immersed in the world, and GMs can skip loads of work outside of sessions. It is sincerely my hope that all your adventures will be "wall to wall and treetop tall."
