HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

This is the second book in my series of random tables for cyberpunk tabletop role-playing game settings. Its purpose, just like the first book, is to help gamemasters cut down their prep time. The random tables in this book are meant to provide details and quick help during sessions.

The first table is News Chatter. This table adds depth to the world with background information the characters would hear while passing screens throughout the city. Some could also serve as mission or adventure hooks if needed.

Items & Things is the next section. Since players like to have their character search every room they enter, these tables help gamemasters fill in details without spending hours of time. Also, the tattoo table offers a variety of interesting descriptions on the fly.

The next section is Encounters & Locations. These two tables give gamemasters flexibility when answering the players' questions about the city. Plus they provide unique locations and situations that will breathe life into the campaign.

Cyberpunk is a globalized world in the extreme. The section Brand & Food gives brand names and food types from around the world so gamemasters can make their campaign seem as real as possible.

The Codes & Passwords tables give the GM quick access to alphanumeric strings so they never have to stop the action when a character learns a password or gains a security code.

The final section is Names. A gamemaster can never have enough names on hand during sessions. Players always want to know the names of NPCs, so having names on hand is a priority for gamemasters.

With the first book and this book in hand, gamemasters running cyberpunk campaigns are prepared to fill their worlds with details that will keep their players coming back for more. Jack in and experience the fullness of cyberspace.
