HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

The Book of Random Tables: Lost Worlds was inspired by the fiction of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Edgar Rice Burroughs, and other authors, as well as films like The Valley of Gwangi.

It provides random tables as resources for any tabletop role-playing games set in Lost Worlds or Lost Valleys. Drawing from staples of the genre, game masters will discover random tables that reflect the character and tenor of Lost World fiction.

Game masters can use these tables in any way they wish—during session prep or even during the session itself. Rolling on the tables is always suggested, but picking results is a viable option as well.

The first section is Items & Things. This section primarily consists of D100 tables, mixed with some D20 tables. Examples of the tables are: Items in a Cave, Items in a Crashed Boat (21st century), Items in a Crashed Plane (mid-20th century), Items in an Iron Age Hovel, Items in a Phoenician Campsite, Items in a Predator's Lair, and more.

The next section is Encounters & Locations. Lost World fiction lives and breathes through encounters and fantastic locations. There are two D100 tables providing 200 weird and strange encounters and locations for RPG campaigns.

Dinosaurs & Plants is a straightforward section featuring the names of dinosaur species and plants from the age of dinosaurs.

The Names section is another important resource for game masters. It includes 200 Caveman Names, 200 Cavewoman Names, and 100 Tribe Names.

The last main section is NPCs. The non-player characters here represent a wide range of the types found in the fiction that inspired this book: Apemen, Awakened Dinosaurs, 200 Cave Dwellers, Lizardmen, and People Lost in Time.

Plus, there is a small Bonus section. It includes two short tables: Location of Lost World and Antagonists.

With these random tables, GMs can always ensure they have creative options at their disposal. Mysteries abound in this world, and who knows if there is a hidden valley where dinosaurs still rule. Go and discover it.
