How to Use this Book

The Book of Random Tables: Treasure Hoards is designed as a resource for dungeon masters (DMs) and game masters (GMs). It provides items, names, and NPCs to enrich tabletop role-playing game sessions and campaigns.

Like the other books in this series, these random tables can be used in any way the DM prefers. Results can be selected directly from the lists, rolled for by the DM, or rolled for by players under the DM's guidance.

Most of the tables in the book use percentile dice. However, a few use D10s or a D20. The tables are organized into the following sections:

Common Items

Treasure hoards throughout history have often included common yet valuable items. This section features tables for coinage, equipment, tools, potions, and weapons.

Gems and Metals

This section contains four D100 tables: Cut Precious Gemstones, Cut Semi-Precious Gemstones, and two tables of metals, primarily ingots.

Odd Treasures

This section includes two D100 tables with random and unusual items that might be found in a treasure hoard, such as a small alabaster sculpture of an otter or an enamelware platter with a pastoral scene.

Named Treasures

Rare and unique items are the focus of this section. It begins with tables for named objects and weapons, including their mechanical game effects. It also includes two D10 tables: Priceless Treasures and Sarcophagus Contents.

Bonus Section

This section contains two smaller tables: a D20 table for Treasure Guardians and a D10 table for Curses on the Treasure.

Treasure Hoard Names

This section has a single table dedicated to the names of famed treasure hoards. Such names can add depth and a sense of legend to your game.

NPCs

The largest section in the book, this includes one thousand different non-player characters. It features: One hundred Claimants, because someone always believes they have a right to the treasure. One hundred Guides to help lead the party to the treasure. Four hundred Expedition Sponsors. Four hundred Rival Hunters.

With these random tables, dungeon masters and game masters have powerful tools to enhance their games, whether in preparation or during play. What are you waiting for? There's a fortune out there waiting to be discovered.

Priceless Treasures

1. The Kraken's Pearl - Perfectly spherical and one foot in diameter, this pearl has been the source of countless tales and sailors' dreams.
2. The Griffon's Quill - Beautifully crafted from a feather of the first griffon, this quill is highly sought after by scribes, wizards, kings, and queens.
3. Djinni Lamp - A tarnished brass lamp of exotic design may appear of little value, but within resides the power to fulfill every person's wildest dreams—a genie offering three wishes.
4. The Spellbook of the Ages - A massive tome measuring four feet by three feet and over a foot thick, this spellbook is bound in chains, sealed with a giant padlock, and said to contain the knowledge of a thousand wizards.
5. The Tooth of the Hydra - It is said that burying this fang will cause the fearsome creature to grow anew, becoming a loyal guardian to the one who planted it.
6. The Obsidian Chalice - Finely crafted from volcanic stone, this chalice promises eternal youth to anyone who drinks from it once a day.
7. The Eldertree Seed - A large, knotty wooden growth said to grow into one of the living trees from the dawn of creation.
8. Vial of Starlight - Believed to be pure light from a distant star, captured by an ancient elven star sailor.
9. Sap of the Silverwood - A sealed vial of sap from an extinct magical tree, said to have the power to revitalize barren land.
10. The Tear of the Queen - A teardrop-cut clear diamond weighing nearly six pounds, a gift from a king to his queen a millennium ago.

Sarcophagus Contents

1. A huge mummy clutching a greatsword that measures more than eight feet long
2. More than one hundred ancient, rare books
3. An inner coffin made of solid gold, containing the remains of an ancient queen
4. A mummy that opens its eyes and lunges out
5. An ivory comb that, when touched, causes the person and their companions to live a day in the distant past
6. A dozen canopic jars that vibrate ever so slightly
7. A mummy holding two bottles of wine that are more than two thousand years old
8. A glowing scepter that burned up the mummy it was entombed with
9. Thousands of gold and silver coins marked with the image of a king who reigned 10,000 years ago
10. A jewel-encrusted crown placed on a mummy's brow

Bonus

Treasure Guardians

1. A silver-scaled dragon sleeps with one eye open. Its fiery breath can melt gold, let alone a careless treasure hunter. Though its scaly hide is impenetrable, the skin under its forelegs is leathery and close to its burning heart.
2. Two monstrous heads are ever-watchful—the first, bearing razor-sharp teeth, and the second, brandishing wicked horns. A serpent-headed tail hisses menacingly. The chimera paces back and forth, never sleeping, always watching.
3. The giant sleeps most of the time, but getting him off the treasure will be the real challenge. Giants aren't particularly happy when awakened from a deep sleep, and no one wants to face a grumpy guardian.
4. The Riddle-Maker guards the way. There will be no passage unless one of the party is especially quick-witted.
5. The Rhyme-Smith wants to play a little game in exchange for passage to the treasure. Which one of the party is brave enough to sing a sonnet or craft a limerick?
6. The animated skeletal remains of the previous owner refuse to allow the party access to the treasure until they can make him laugh.
7. The ancient warrior has guarded this treasure since time immemorial. Cursed to remain alive, the guardian will only be freed from this duty and this life when they meet their equal in armed combat.
8. Why did it have to be snakes? The floor writhes with their bodies, each one more venomous than the last.
9. An ominous fog fills the space. Though nothing can be seen, a malevolent presence can be felt. The air reeks of death.
10. How does one even go about getting past a ghostly guardian? Apparently, the previous owner of the treasure refuses to leave their possessions, even in death.
11. A ticking sound reverberates through the space. Though the clockwork beast remains absolutely motionless, there is a whir, a buzz, and a ticking deep within it.
12. The treasure sits upon sand, and the sand is "breathing." It undulates up and down, betraying its true nature: a creature that can form itself into anything and re-form itself if attacked.
13. Terracotta warriors stand guard. Each holds a weapon in its hand and a fierce expression on its face. There must be hundreds of them.
14. A golem doesn't need to sleep. It doesn't need to eat. Its only desire is to do its master's bidding. It waits and waits, never thinking of abandoning its post. It doesn't care if you beg for mercy. It doesn't care if you cry out in dismay. It doesn't care how many pieces of you are left on the floor once it's done with you.
15. A unicorn with a blood-stained horn doesn't inspire visions of rainbows and sunshine, especially when there appears to be real fire burning in its eyes.
16. It's just an old, rusty, and empty suit of armor, but it is standing in the way. The claymore in its hands doesn't look rusty though. And its voice is clear and menacing.
17. The way is barred by an individual sitting at a beautifully carved table. On the table, an ancient game has its pieces already in place. Across from the individual, an empty chair waits for someone to settle in. Who wants to play?
18. A swarm of golden scarabs flies in mass around the treasure. Each scarab is the size of a dinner plate, with mandibles capable of cutting through steel.
19. A fire stands in the way. No matter where the party moves, it always seems to anticipate their movements. And the heat coming off it is almost unbearable. Could that crackling sound actually be a cackling sound? The fire laughs and mocks any who dare approach it.
20. Usually, octopi are found in the ocean—not this one. Usually, octopi don't get much bigger than a hundred pounds, but this one is much larger. Usually, octopi don't have a weapon in each tentacle, yet this one does.

Curses on the Treasure

1. Slow loss of strength
2. Rapid aging
3. Outbursts of uncontrollable anger
4. Recurring nightmares
5. Perpetual bad luck
6. Powerful feelings of jealousy
7. Slow descent into madness
8. Prevents restful sleep
9. Wounds heal slowly
10. Attracts dangerous animals
